the 1990s, the number of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia has increased in many countries, including the United Kingdom (Murray & Lewis, 1994). The prevalence of schizophrenia is estimated to be 1% of the population (Murray & Lewis, 1994).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with schizophrenia. The World Health Organization (WHO) has developed a strategy for the care of people with schizophrenia, which emphasizes the importance of providing a range of services to meet the needs of individuals (WHO, 1993). The WHO strategy is based on the following principles:

- (1) The need to provide a range of services to meet the needs of individuals.
- (2) The need to provide services that are based on the principles of recovery and self-help.
- (3) The need to provide services that are based on the principles of community care.
- (4) The need to provide services that are based on the principles of human rights.
